THE FRUITS OF FEDERATION: SOUTH AUSTRALIAN EXPECTATIONS

After 20 years of false starts, failed experiments, conferences, conventions and referendums, the dawn of the twentieth century saw the inauguration of the Commonwealth of Australia. South Australians were key players in the making of the constitution.

Alfred Deakin had said that 'measured on all-round ability the South Australian delegation was undoubtedly strongest'. Bernard Wise from New South Wales spoke of 'the immense superiority of the South Australian delegation over that of every other colony.'

But did federation live up to their expectations?

Presented by The Hon. Dr. John Bannon, AO

PATRITTI WINES OF MARION

Giovanni Patritti was one of the early Italian immigrants to seek a new and brighter future in South Australia. Despite the heartache of leaving his large, winemaking family in the region of Piedmont, Giovanni felt compelled to embark on the risky yet exciting voyage to Adelaide and arrived in 1925.

He was quickly struck by the colony's lack of fine table wine and the dominance of beer in Australian society. He observed the abundance of sunshine and fertile soils of the Adelaide Plains and the suitability for quality wine production and just one year after his arrival, Giovanni leased a little less than one hectare in Dover Gardens and planted vines. He soon employed fellow countryman Cristiano Bissacca and the men built a small winery and began trading to customers in Adelaide and Melbourne.

Since then, the winery has grown steadily. Giovanni's original 'shed' now houses a modern winery and business continues to thrive on this historical site. Today, second and third generation Patritti family members manage the only truly operational winery in Metropolitan Adelaide.
